The Digital Age Handbook

Change is coming. A constructive dynamic wind over the next decade will devastate the state superstructure worldwide. We will enter a new Digital Era which will affect everything: jobs, politics, education, welfare...

The change will be driven by two powerful forces: the mountain of debt and new, innovative technology.

Maximising Individual Wealth sets out how individuals can survive the coming changes, and how they can manage their career and their wealth. It also describes how the no-longer-affordable welfare state will have to be restructured in order to help those who can't manage society's changes on their own.

With the world suffering some of the greatest natural and man-made imbalances ever, the result is a watershed in global affairs that has not been present for centuries. These events are driving many people in the Western World into a sense of despair that is endangering their jobs, homes, savings and pensions.

However, through the manageable darkness will emerge the Digital Age when every person will have the possibility of having the dignity of making their own contribution.

"William Houston is a master at seeing the relevance of the lessons of history to the present day problems. His previous books have been full of predictions of developments that have now become reality. He is now able to set out a teaching course to help the world pull out of the problems it has gotten into. This instruction will be of interest to all who hope to survive the bear market." Robin Griffiths, Chief Strategist of the ECU Group and former chairman of the International Society of Technical Analysts

About William Houston

William Houston joined the Royal Navy at the end of the Second World War and specialised in weapons. After leaving the service, he qualified as a chartered engineer and an administrator before embarking on a career as a company recovery specialist either directing or advising a wide range of industrial and commercial concerns. For ten years he was an industrial advisor to a merchant bank before taking up a career in writing, becoming interested in the cycles of the world including economics, climate, politics, warfare, disease.

He subsequently became the principal of The School of Global Recovery.
